About Charles Van Hise

Professor Charles Van Hise, geologist and education, was the University of Wisconsin's president from 1903 to 1918. Van Hise's forward thinking blended the English model of liberal arts education, the German model of research and graduate education, and the academic emphasis on outreach. In 1910 he authored the country's first textbook on the conservation of natural resource studies.

Our Hotel's professional staff is committed to making every event a success!
